New Leader for Alumni Association

Beginning as a part-time student, Nancy was very active on campus, as editor and in many roles on the student newspaper, The Paper, playing intramural softball and volley ball, and serving on the Homecoming Queen’s Court. Her mentor was the former longtime Dean of Students Dr. J. Harrison Morson. Nancy helped promote the need for professional counselors on the College staff, an activity that led to her decision to become a counselor. She was the 1973 Post-Day Award recipient, as the graduate who best exemplified ideals of scholarship, leadership and service. She says, “I found a niche within the comfortable atmosphere of the College, which literally transformed me into a more outgoing individual. UCC was just the right size and gave me a sense of who I am; it helped me to define what I wanted to do with my life.” After UCC she earned a BA in psychology and an MA in counseling at Kean. She is a Licensed Professional Counselor, a Certified Clinical Mental Health Counselor, and a Nationally Certified Counselor, and has been a leader in the New Jersey counseling profession for years.

After 18 years as executive director of the RESOLVE Community Counseling Center in Scotch Plains and a stint as a pharmaceutical representative for Pfizer, Nancy is now a mental health counselor in private practice, and works part-time for the Counseling Center for Human Development in Cranford. She is president of the New Jersey Counseling Association and former president and current Ethics Chair of the American Mental Health Counselors Association, which in 1998 awarded her their Public and Community Service Award for her “tireless efforts to promote the field of counseling”.

This energetic alumna finds time to enjoy gardening, antiquing, bicycling, swimming, and golfing with husband Robb, reading mystery and detective novels and membership in the Red Hat Society. She plans to further investigate her New Jersey roots as a descendant of the Crane family that Cranford is named for.

One of her goals for the Alumni Association is to encourage mini-reunions of alumni interest groups, and she wants to begin with a reunion of alumni who worked on the student newspaper with her. Any alum interested in helping to get a group together is invited to contact Nancy at nbenz79@aol.com, or write to her care of Alumni Affairs at UCC.

Union County College Leads the Way

The Partnership for the Future Campaign reached an historic benchmark this summer, passing the $5,000,000 mark with gifts and pledges totaling $5,087,476 as of June 30, 2005. This is the largest amount ever raised by a New Jersey community college. The total goal for the Campaign is $7,500,000 of which $5,000,000 is earmarked for the scholarship endowment. The remaining $2,500,000 will furnish and equip the new Elizabeth campus building. To celebrate this achievement, Capital Campaign leaders gathered for a barbecue on August 23, 2005 in the beautiful Cranford Commons gardens.

The campaign will continue until the final goal is achieved. There is still time to support this important campaign and to be counted among the hundreds of donors who have already made their commitments and who will be listed in a final Partnerships for the Future Capital & Endowment Campaign report.

Alumni Profile

ADRIAN O. MAPP ’86

Barbados native, family man, accountant, volunteer, Sunday school teacher, pharmaceutical company associate director, councilman, Freeholder. All these roles define Adrian Mapp, but two constants are his love of family and his devotion to Plainfield.

Adrian Mapp was 21 in 1977 when he emigrated to the United States to join family in Queens. He later settled in Plainfield and began his college career at Union County College. He claims the quality of his UCC education was second to none and that the foundation for his future was laid there. He worked full-time while at UCC and also while attending Rutgers U. for his BS in accounting and Fairleigh Dickinson U. for his MBA with an emphasis on international business. A CPA, he has worked for Bristol-Myers Squibb for 15 years, and now works in the global logistics unit which focuses on Asian Pacific markets.

His political career began when he got up one day in 1996 and decided to get involved to see if conditions in Plainfield could be improved. He went to City Hall to find out what he had to do to become a candidate. With the help of friends he ran for City Council, winning 500 votes. During this process he met then Councilman Albert McWilliams who asked him to run his successful mayoral campaign in the third ward. The new mayor than appointed him to his own Council seat. Adrian served seven years on the Plainfield City Council, and was President when elected to a three-year term to the Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders, beginning January 2005.

When asked what has given him the greatest satisfaction as a public servant, he said it has to be his key role in the revitalization project that has transformed a building that had been blighted for 25 years (the former Tepper’s Department Store) into 75 apartments and retail and office space in downtown Plainfield.

Adrian and Amelia Mapp celebrated their silver anniversary this year. Amelia is a Realtor-Associate with Century 21 in Scotch Plains, and both their daughters are in school: Shermona is at Rutgers University Law School where she is on the Law Review, and Ayisha is a high school senior.

Freeholder Mapp makes time to also serve his community as treasurer of the Frontier International Plainfield Area Club and as chair of the capital campaign of Plainfield’s St. Mark’s Episcopal Church; he also served six years on the Plainfield Health Center board. Cricket is his sport, a legacy of his Barbados homeland. Although he has little time to play this leisurely game these days, he is President of the Combined Islands Cricket Club in Plainfield. UCC is pleased to salute this distinguished alum.
UCC Remembers Professor Bielefeld

A memorial service will be held in the Union County College Cranford Commons at 4 PM on Wednesday, October 19 to celebrate the life of Professor Emeritus Hermann J. Bielefeld who died on August 23, 2005 in Plainfield, NJ at age 95.

Professor Bielefeld taught at UCC from 1934 (the year after the College was founded) until his retirement in 1977, and afterwards part-time. He is remembered as a superior, often riveting, teacher by generations of students. Although he taught Romance languages and music appreciation, he was best known as a professor of German. He was Chairman of Humanities, and of the Committee on Academic Evaluation, as well as a co-founder of the Pi Kappa Psi Fraternity in 1935.

A Summit High School graduate, he was Phi Beta Kappa at Lafayette College, and received his MA at Harvard University. He was a veteran of World War II, serving as an interpreter and documents expert and then working on documents for the Nuremberg trials. A true Renaissance man and a world traveler, he had many interests, including history, archeology, music, linguistics and art. His hobbies were collecting stamps, coins and political memorabilia.

Professor Bielefeld was a life-long friend of the late Union County College President Dr. Kenneth C. MacKay. A member of the Union County College Foundation Heritage Society, he was honored by the Board of Trustees of Union County College and by the Union County College Alumni Association, and celebrated his 90th birthday with a reunion tribute at the College. He mentored and befriended many young people over the years and will be fondly remembered by dear friends, former colleagues and students.

In keeping with his wishes, a scholarship in memory of his mother is being established at the College and gifts in his memory may be made to the Elizabeth J. Bielefeld Memorial Scholarship through the Union County College Foundation.

Students Help Save Program from Drastic Federal Budget Cut

Did You Know?

...any of these reasons why UCC is committed to offering adult basic education, English as a Second Language, and workforce development programs?

In Union County:

• One half of persons ages 16 to 64 function at the lowest levels of literacy.

• 100,000 foreign-born residents identify themselves as not speaking English very well.

• The Elizabeth and Plainfield school districts are among the poorest in New Jersey, marked by high drop out rates, low rates of graduation, and much lower rates of entrance into higher education.

• 63% of welfare recipients do not have a high school diploma.

• 9.2% of the population with children under 18 years old live in poverty.

...or how UCC helps through programs like these?

• AmeriCorps
• Literacy and Civics
• Community Technology Centers
• Project LEARN
• Project ABLE Plus
• Project Centro Hispanico

Learning about an impending 63% federal budget cut for Adult Basic Education programs galvanized the students in UCC’s Project ABLE (Adult Basic Literacy Education) program. Last year they wrote and then faxed or emailed more than 800 letters to legislators in Washington! With the support of the New Jersey Association for Lifelong Learning, their efforts, together with those of adult students across the country, were successful.

In addition to teaching an invaluable lesson about how to advocate within the political system, this activity helped teach critical skills in letter writing, grammar, computer usage and civics. Aside from knowing that they had helped to avert a budget cut that would have doomed the program that was making a tremendous difference in their lives, the students’ greatest thrill was receiving personal letters from the representatives and senators they had contacted.

The program has surpassed its goals, but improvement in self-confidence cannot be quantified. Last year 71% of Project ABLE learners were non-native speakers, and expressed how happy they were to realize they are no longer afraid to speak English as they go about their daily lives.

Director Marlene Moreira-Loff is enthusiastic about Project Adult Basic Literacy Education PLUS and thrilled to witness her students’ successes. She says “PLUS” was added to the program name this year because of additional consortium partners, but also because of the “plus” the program provides - these extras help students to meet not only academic goals but also life goals. For example, to promote family literacy they sponsor visits to public libraries for family groups, and encourage applying for library cards. Pre and post surveys of all students who are parents indicated a direct correlation between increasing the parent’s literacy skills and more involvement in their children’s education and literacy activities, such as helping with homework, reading to them, attending parent-teacher conferences, taking them to the library, and buying books and magazines.

The program philosophy is to subordinate teaching to learning. Thus, when student-parents indicated that language was a barrier in communicating with their children’s teachers, classroom activities included role-playing of parent-teacher conferences, learning common vocabulary, greetings, small talk, and watching relevant video tapes. A key to the program’s success is highly participative classroom instruction combined with innovative computer-assisted educational software. Computerized lessons make learning fun and introduce a majority of students to technology. All students become computer literate and utilize computers to increase their skill levels and help with job searches.

Marlene, who has a master’s in education from Kean U., has worked with students at UCC’s Center for Education and Workforce Development for 16 years. Jorge Loff ’84, an MIS supervisor at UCC (and Marlene’s husband), has developed computer programs to track program data. Students use swipe cards which give accurate readings of time spent in classes, a boon for the program’s record-keeping and evaluation components.

For three years the Dept. of Education funded Project Adult Basic Literacy Education (ABLE). The New Jersey Department of Labor has been the funding source since fiscal 2005, granting $1,050,000 in the current year for Project ABLE Plus consortium members, six core service-providing partners: Union County College, the lead agency, and Urban Workforce Advantage, Union County Vocational and Technical Schools, the Elizabeth and Linden Boards of Education, and Literacy Volunteers of Union County, all of which work with the Union County One-Stop System/Workforce Investment Board.

This is truly a community-wide effort. This year the Project ABLE Plus consortium will serve 2,200 adults at 15 locations throughout Union County plus all 22 Union County public libraries, and will work with seven supporting organizations. At press time more than 1,000 program candidates are on a waiting list. For more information, please contact Ms. Moreira-Loff in the Bayway Center in Elizabeth at 908/527-7981 or mloff@ucc.edu.
